

Co-operate or else, says gov't

TORONTO CP - Labor Minister John Munro said Wednesday that if labor-management relations do not improve, there is a possibility of greater government intervention "to protect the economy."

"Labor and management must take a hard new look at their relationship and their responsibilities," Munro said in a speech prepared for delivery to the Kiwanis Club.

"I am confident that labor and management will accept this challenge and adopt that co-operative spirit."

However, Munro warned that "if the adversary element continues to frustrate the industrial relationship, there will be no winner, only losers."

"Government must provide the leadership and, through Parliament, fashion the rules and supply the programs," he said.

"We quite literally can't afford to let industrial relations slide from one confrontation to another, from one crisis to the next."

Munro said government, labor and management must "fact up to the options available to us and we have to make a selection."

Munro said the options are that "we continue under the adversary system based on confrontation and mutual distrust, with no tripartite consensus on post-control responsibilities; we face the prospect of greater government intervention in labor-management relations in order to protect the economy; or we accept the reality of a new era in labor affairs that demands new attitudes and a more realistic sharing of responsibilities by government, labor and business."

MEET WITH COUNCIL Parking concerns Lazelle owners

Brain Gregg
Herald Staff Writer.

Owners of the 4700-block Lazelle expressed concern over council's proposed parking plan for future development of their property during an informal meeting between the two groups Tuesday.

Council is suggesting the owners, in the future, build 40 feet from the street and share a communal parking area along Lazelle.

Some people said they did not like the idea because business that has more customers than another business would take up more parking space, leaving customers of the smaller business to seek parking elsewhere.

Alderman Vic Jolliffe said this concern came as "shock to council and the administration because they thought zoning would be the main concern."

Council wants the owners to build 30 feet from the street so that Lazelle can be widened from its existing 20 paved feet to 54 paved feet with curbs and gutters.

There would be street parking on the south side of Lazelle but a parking barrier would be put in between the street and the communal parking area with no street parking on the north side of Lazelle.

Six feet would be allowed for a sidewalk on the south side of the street and the block would be brought up to of the block at the Post Office.

According to Jolliffe the proposed communal parking would be similar to the Lazelle Centre between Kalum and CFTK.

However, the parking area would accommodate three times the parking the Lazelle Centre provides and would be parallel parking.

He said owners would be able to develop their own separate buildings and would be their own property owners even though they would share the same parking lot.

Mayor Dave Maroney said the meeting cleared up some misconceptions about council's objectives although many owners wanted to have the block zoned C-1 (commercial) instead of the present P-1 Special which accommodates the parking plan.

He said if the block was zoned C-1 the parking plan would not be accommodated.

Maroney said eight owners were at the meeting and this is about two-thirds of the total owners on the block.

He said another concern that was cleared up was the question of garbage pick-up from the back alley. "They have 25 foot back alley and there is lots of room for garbage trucks to come in and out and turn around," Maroney said.

Maroney said council's plan does not stop other people from bringing in their own plans. "We would certainly consider any plan any owner wants to bring in," he said.

He said most of the owners present at the meeting were there to listen but a couple of the owners were "uptight about the whole thing."

Jolliffe said the court case involving Mickey Johnson is confusing the public's view of what is taking place on the 4700-block and he wants to see it out of the way as soon as possible.

Kalum Street, Emerson and Lazelle between Emerson and Kalum were recapped this week under council's 1977 maintenance program. Funds for the work came out of general revenue and the work was done because the streets were breaking up. Here the paving machine receives a new load from a dump truck while the roller completes the job at the far end.

Bodies found after plunge

The bodies of two California geologists who plunged about 250 feet down a rock face about 40 miles west of here were recovered by Terrace RCMP Wednesday afternoon.

No foul play is suspected in the deaths, believed to have occurred last Aug. 8, the date of the last entry in their diary.

No names are being released until next of kin can be identified. The bodies were believed working on a university project.

RCMP Cpl. Doug Joinson, who helped recover the bodies, said they were found about 10 feet apart at the bottom of the steep rock face. The two were not equipped in any way for rock climbing, though hikers would be foolish to attempt climbing in that area without proper equipment, he said. It appears the two were heading back to their base camp and had to climb the face along the route.

RCMP were notified at 2:15 yesterday by Okanagan Helicopters, which flew in to check on them.

Shot-in-the-arm budget needed--Clark

OTTAWA CP - Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark called Wednesday for the Liberal government to bring down a new budget and to recall parliament in three weeks to approve it.

A "quick stimulus" budget could be devised in a short time and should contain personal and sales tax cuts, Clark said at a news conference.

He recommended tax cuts for persons earning less than $15,000 to $16,000 annually.

He also said the federal government should provide grants to the provinces whose government could then reduce sales taxes.

Clark's demands echoed similar proposals made Tuesday by major labor and business spokesmen.

The latest round of appeals for government action to stimulate the economy follows the release of government reports showing a decline in production in the national economy.

"The value of the Canadian dollar has slipped badly on world money markets. Unemployment continues to increase and living costs are rising despite the controls program," Clark added.

His plea, however, is likely to go unheeded by the Liberals. Finance Minister Donald MacDonald turned down demands for a new budget Tuesday, saying he wants more time for last spring's budget measures to show an impact.

Clark charged that the government is worrying about Quebec, for political gains, at the expense of the economy.

He noted that the government recalled Parliament last month to legislate the legally striking air controllers back to work.

"The threat of one million unemployed and of a further slide into a serious economic recession surely demands an equal response," he said.

Parliament is scheduled to resume Oct. 17.

Police also maintained public interest in the search by issuing revised drawings of the suspect. Police admitted, however, that the killer could have changed his appearance by cutting his hair or growing a beard.

FERRY ISLAND SLAYINGS

Four murders charged

VANCOUVER CP - RCMP said Wednesday a 23-year-old Chilliwack, B.C. man has been charged with four counts of first-degree murder in the July 18 Ferry Island slaying of four teenagers.

Inspector Les Holmes told a news conference that Walter Murray Madsen was charged in county court in Chilliwack after being arrested without a struggle Tuesday at his home in Chilliwack.

Holmes said Madsen was arrested during a follow-up of a tip from a member of the public.

The body of Leola Gulkar, 15, has not been recovered, Holmes said, but "our investigation lead us to believe that she, too, was murdered."

Madsen also is charged with the murder of Evert Den Hertog, 19, of Rosedale, B.C., his brother John, 16, and Bert Menger, 19, of Clearbrook.

Holmes said no weapon had been recovered and police have "no reason to believe that any further persons are involved in the murders in question."

Police had reconstructed the movements of the suspected killer up to 90 minutes before the shooting, when a man similar to the police description was seen pointing a rifle towards the river.

Investigations showed the assailant was very thin, about six feet tall and with long dark hair. He wore a checked black and red jacket, black or unfaded blue jeans, a floppy dark hat and work boots.

A man had been seen in the area of the shootings carrying an object of about the same size as the sport version of about the same size as the sport version of the weapon used in the shootings.

The search for the Ferry Island killer was one of the largest in Lower Mainland history, but led to scores of dead ends despite the hundreds of tips provided to police by the public. Police said at one point they had investigated and eliminated 200 suspects.

Although young Ed Menger was able to alert police to the shootings almost immediately, roadblocks in the Agassiz region failed to net the gunman as he fled west to Vancouver in the Mengers' pickup truck.

As the killer's trail cooled, police commissioned Dr. Anthony Marcus, head of forensic psychiatry at the University of British Columbia, to prepare a

Farmers shocked at land changes

VICTORIA CP - The British Columbia Federation of Agriculture said Wednesday it is shocked at amendments to the Land Commission Act introduced Tuesday in the legislature.

"We don't want to see our agricultural land-use problems being resolved in the political arena," federation president Ralph Barichello said in a news release, "and that is exactly what is going to happen if the provincial cabinet is given the power to overrule decisions of the land commission."

Under the amendments introduced by Environment Minister Jim Mielsen, the cabinet's environmental land use committee would be able to consider appeals rejected by the commission. In the current system, an appellant first must gain the approval of the commissioners before the matter can be taken to the cabinet, but this is being done away with.

Barichello said the move reflects an increasingly inconsistent attitude of the government towards problems of the agricultural community.

"Last week we were told that in order to avoid circumventing the work of the current inquiry into the food production process, B.C.'s participation in the national broiler marketing plan had to be delayed," he said.

"This week, we discover that the government intends to amend the Land Commission Act in spite of the fact that that same committee also has been charged with the responsibility of reviewing the agricultural land reserve system."

"Obviously, there is not much consistency to the application of food policy in B.C. these days and this in turn is beginning to create a good deal of confusion and discontent within the farming sector," he said.

Barichello also recommended that the agricultural land reserve be taken out of the hands of the environment ministry, and agriculture ministry.

Smith returned in all-white elections

From AP-REUTER
SALISBURY CP - Prime Minister Ian Smith retained control of parliament in Rhodesia's general election, and when vote-counting paused late Wednesday appeared certain of the two-thirds majority he needs to negotiate a racial settlement on his own terms.

Partial results of balloting by the mostly white electorate gave Smith's Rhodesian Front party 38 of the 44 seats he needs for a two-thirds majority in the House of Assembly.

Returns from rural areas, where Smith is strong, are expected today.

There are 66 seats in the House, 50 reserved for whites.

Smith's party held 38 seats before the election, which he called in an attempt to obtain the 44 seat block that will enable him to make constitutional changes.

Such changes would allow him to work out a power-sharing arrangement with moderates in Rhodesia's black majority and resist an Anglo-American plan that is reported to call for his ouster and disbanding of Rhodesia's white-led armed forces.

Late Wednesday, Smith reiterated his intention to seek talks with local leaders not linked to black guerrillas who since 1972 have been fighting to topple his government. None of the moderate black leaders, however, has yet agreed to meet with Smith.

Smith said he already is looking forward to the next step in his plans for the country's future - a meeting today with British Foreign Secretary David Owen and Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Owen and Young are reported to be carrying plans for Smith's resignation to make way for a British appointed administrator who would lay the ground for one man, one vote elections amongst Rhodesia's six million blacks and 270,000 whites for a black majority government.

Damage fixed

An estimated $100 in damage wrecked by vandals in upper Little Park was repaired Wednesday by parks and recreation department crews, says Superintendent Bill Casey.

He said unknown vandals smashed signs, pulled flowers out of the ground, pulled half a dozen trees up by their roots, tore a railing apart, broke beer bottles and threw a picnic table down a hill.

The damage took four workers half a day to cleanup, he said, and estimated the bill could come to about $100.

The area has been vandalized several times this summer, said Casey, and the department had to replace 250 trees pulled out of the ground just between May and June.

Though employees work in two shifts lasting until midnight in a nearby building, vandals hit the park regularly, sometimes damaging as many as 45 trees.

Rhodesia bombs Zambian town

LUSAKA Reuter - Zambia said Rhodesian jet aircraft bombed Zambian territory Wednesday near the Zambian border town of Feira.

A government spokesman said the raid came after an exchange of fire between Rhodesian and Zambian troops near Feira, which is close to the borders with Rhodesia and Mozambique.

The spokesman said in a statement released by the information ministry that shortly after the exchange of fire "rebel Rhodesian jet bombers crossed the border and dropped bombs on Zambian territory."

He said the Rhodesian attack was "repelled by Zambian troops."

No further information was immediately available. The statement came three days after President Kenneth Kaunda had publicly predicted that Zambia would come under air attack shortly.

He had already warned Zambians they were on a war footing with Rhodesia and should be prepared for so-called "hot-pursuit" raids such as those launched by Rhodesia into Mozambique.

Black nationalist guerrillas fighting to topple white-minority rule in Rhodesia are based in both Mozambique and Zambia.

In Salisbury, a Rhodesian defence force commander said Rhodesian forces retaliating against Zambian fire "neutralized" two positions on the Zambian side of the border early Wednesday. It made no mention of any air strike.

It said a building at Kanyemba, on the Rhodesian side of the Zambezi River border just across the Feira, was damaged in the exchange but there were no Rhodesian casualties.

Still cleaning up two days after burglars entered their home and searched every room is Orville Spencer, of 3304 Munroe St. He and his wife Florence were holidaying over the weekend when thieves broke into their home by smashing a utility room window. The intruders thoroughly messed up the home during their search, netting about $50 in loose change including a collection of American coins. Twice in the past two years the Spencer's home has been robbed with only small amount of cash taken each time. Times have changed for Spencer, who homesteaded in the Nass area in the late 1940s before coming to Terrace. In 1948, he remembers, he left his cabin unlocked for six months and the $75 in coins on a shelf was still there when he returned.

SAY WESTERN PREMIERS Improve grain handling

WINNIPEG CP - The premiers of the four western provinces have expressed concern about delays in putting recommendations of the Hall Commission into effect and have asked for an early meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau.

The concerns are contained in a letter to the prime minister from Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer on behalf of premiers of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Schreyer suggested to Trudeau that a meeting be held in Calgary.

The letter, dated Monday and made public today, is critical of federal Transport Minister Otto Lang for his apparent lack of concern about the Hall Commission's report on grain handling and transportation.

The letter said the minister has either delayed action on the report or acted in a manner contrary to the spirit of the report.

Schreyer singled out the creation of a Prairie rail authority as one of the key recommendations of the Hall Commission that has not yet been acted on by Ottawa.

The western provinces agree that such a decision-making body is needed to look after railway branch lines.

The letter notes that the $100 million grant recently announced by the federal government for improvements in other branch lines is not being overseen by a western agency, but is being arranged by negotiations between the railways and Lang's office.

Schreyer emphasized that he and his colleagues would not regard the Canadian Transport Commission as a satisfactory substitute for a Prairie Rail authority because the commission in the past "not been particularly sensitive or responsive to western Canadian needs."

The other complaints of the premiers are that abandoned railway rights-of-way are to be taken over by the federal government instead of the provinces and Ottawa's lack of commitment to improvements for the British Columbia port of Prince Rupert and the northern Manitoba port of Churchill.

Schreyer's letter noted that Trudeau pledged support for western economic development in an April 18 speech to a meeting of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters in Winnipeg.

Instead, the federal government has created a Prairie rail action committee.

Terms of reference for this group were formally made public today in Saskatoon. The committee will advise the federal government on the rehabilitation of branch lines before the end of 1978 and will evaluate further the Prairie Rail Authority concept.

The letter from Schreyer notes that the $100 million grant recently announced by the federal government for improvements in branch lines is not being overseen by a western agency, but is being arranged by negotiations between the railways and Lang's office.

THEIR LANGUAGE RIGHTS FORGOTTEN

Feds support Quebec Inuits

OTTAWA CP - Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand says he supports Inuit Eskimos in northern Quebec in their struggle against the province's language legislation.

A statement released today by the minister says he "supports the Northern Quebec Inuit Association in its struggle by democratic means against Quebec Bill 101 to preserve and promote the Inuit language and culture."

Allmand also said he called Camille Laurin, Quebec's cultural development minister, last Friday and asked that the government withdraw special police forces sent to northern Quebec communities protesting against the legislation.

"This was not agreed to," Allmand said. The police remain.

Allmand stated that to his knowledge a federal minister has no authority to order the withdrawal of the police or the removal of Quebec government employees.

The Inuit have asked the police and public servants to leave their communities and some natives are talking of trying to separate Inuit areas from the remainder of the province.

Allmand said he appreciates the legitimacy of the Inuit association requests concerning the language legislation and "feels that because they are so few in number they could hardly affect the language situation in Quebec if granted." There are 4, Inuit in the province.

The minister said Quebec's legislation, which passed third reading last week, does not protect all the natives' language rights, Inuit who are not party to the James Bay agreement - a multi-million-dollar land claim settlement with Inuit and Crees in northern Quebec - are not protected under Quebec's language legislation.

The minister has delayed royal proclamation of the James Bay agreement until the language problems are resolved.

The Inuit say they are being forced to adopt the use of French instead of native languages or English.

The Quebec government says its language legislation protects Inuit linguistic and cultural rights.

Both Allmand and Quebec Premier Rene Levesque have agreed to meet with Inuit leaders to try to resolve the dispute.

Levesque said Tuesday that the federal government was responsible for acts of civil disobedience by the Inuit, who have cut off water and stopped garbage removal at government buildings in some communities.

"You tell me who finances it the Inuit association and I'll tell you who controls it," Levesque said.

David Payne, a trouble-shooter on language issues for the Quebec government, has been in the north for several days trying to convince Inuit that the language legislation is not dangerous to their future.

Jean Fournier, executive director of the Indian affairs native land claims office says that heavy-handed tactics by the Quebec government have resulted in the tension in the north.

The Quebec government "has behaved with the grace of an elephant," Fournier said.

LRB ORDER

Sawfilers sent back

VANCOUVER CP - Sawfilers who shut down 10 Vancouver Island sawmills Monday idling more than 2,000 millworkers have been ordered back to work by Ed Peck, chairman of the British Columbia Labor Relations Board.

Peck said Tuesday the work stoppages and picketing were illegal after Forest Industrial Relations, FIR, which represents the industry, asked for a blanket cease-and-desist order.

Peck told FIR lawyer Ben Trevino that the order was informal and a formal order would be issued today if the wildcat strikes continued or spread to the mainland.

He ruled that the strike was illegal because contract negotiations had been successful and because the pickets had not been authorized by their union.

In a brief of the board, FIR president Keith Bennett said the strike was the result of a disagreement between the filers and their union. He said Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America which represents the sawfilers, had told the strikers to return to their jobs.

Sawfilers walked out because a collective agreement reached Friday FIR and the IWA did not contain pay provisions they had demanded. The agreement is being voted on by union members this week.

The job action shut down mills in Nanaimo, Ladysmith, Victoria and Cowichan Bay. Ken Joyce, a filers' spokesman at Nanaimo said the workers were upset that their demand for adjusted pay rates was dropped from last week's agreement.

At issue is the pay spread between the three classifications of filer. Those on the lowest scale earn $9.09 an hour, at the upper end, $9.29 an hour. It had been informed that 1977 was not a year for wage revisions for any particular group because the amount would be taken into consideration as part of the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

He also said the industry has agreed to meet with a union committee during the term of the new contract to discuss filing room problems.

Before Peck's decision, Joyce said he expected all 500 filers in the province would join the protest in the next few days and picket lines would remain up until the matter is resolved.

ON LANGUAGE RIGHTS

School stands firm

MONTREAL CP - The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal PSBGM has decided to stand firm in offering freedom of choice in the language of education, despite Premier Rene Levesque's charge that such a course would amount to civil disobedience.

PSBGM chairman Joan Dougherty said Wednesday the board will "go through the motions" of obeying the regulations of Bill 101, the new French language charter, by using school registration forms provided by the Quebec government.

But the board will not force any child to go to a French school against the wishes of his parents, Mrs. Dougherty said.

"This isn't a save the PSBGM fight," she said. "This is a people's fight to save a pluralistic way of life, and the time has come when we can no longer allow the government to take away fundamental rights of individuals."

A resolution adopted at a meeting of the PSBGM Monday declared that the board would advise parents of the implications of the language law but would leave to parents the final choice of whether they want their children educated in French or English.

The board also said it would back parents if they wanted to challenge the law in court and would appeal to the federal government to ask the Supreme Court of Canada for a ruling on the law's constitutionality.

Commenting on the board's action, Premier Levesque said Tuesday: "Call it what you like, it is administrative civil disobedience... and that cannot be tolerated."

He said measures would have to be taken to counter the board's stand but did not specify what the government's response might be. Levesque also called the PSBGM resolution an "emotional kind of reaction."

Mrs. Dougherty dismissed

the premier's statement, saying: "Our decision certainly wasn't an emotional one. It was taken after a great deal of deliberation because this situation has been building for years."

The possibility of breaking a law was distasteful to all members of the PSBGM, Mrs. Dougherty said.

Exceptions would be made for children with brothers or sisters already in English school and for children with one parent educated in English anywhere and resident in Quebec when the law was passed last Friday.

Pipeline talks begin today

OTTAWA CP - Energy Secretary James Schlesinger of the United States arrives today for negotiations with the federal government on a northern pipeline to move Alaskan natural gas to U.S. markets.

The one-day session is expected to be the last before President Jimmy Carter decides whether to favor a pipeline across Canada or to back a rival proposal for an all-U.S. route.

Government officials here say the secretary also plans a one-hour meeting with Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie to discuss a wide-range of energy issues.

The federal government already has tentatively approved a plan by Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. for a $10 billion pipeline through the southern Yukon to move the fuel.

But final approval depends on whether suitable terms and conditions can be negotiated with Washington.

Carter is scheduled to announce his pipeline choice on Wednesday, the same day Prime Minister Trudeau visits Washington for the signing of the new Panama Canal treaty, under which the U.S. will hand back full control of the waterway to Panama by the year 2000.

The U.S. says that if Canada pushes for too much in the talks, Carter might decide to go ahead with a proposal from El Paso Co. to build a pipeline across the gas by tanker to the southern 48 states.

Negotiations at the ministerial level opened in Washington last Friday, but there were differing reports on how much progress was made.

U.S. officials said they were disappointed and that the lack of progress might have lowered prospects for the Yukon line.

But Government House Leader Allan MacEachen, chief negotiator for the federal government, said he the talks went well and that the negotiations were conducted in a good atmosphere.

HEALTH REASONS

Principal granted year leave

John Bastin, principal of Caledonia Senior Secondary and for ten years a school administrator in School District 86, has been granted a one-year leave of absence for health reasons.

Bastin requested the leave and at a special board meeting Monday night, trustees acceded to his request.

Interviews for applicants to fill the temporary vacancy will be held this evening. Because this is a temporary position, the board hopes to fill it with local people. There will probably be no outside advertising of the vacancy.

As the school year approaches, there remain three vacancies for specialists in the school district. The positions of elementary counsellor, speech therapist, and learning assistance teacher require new incumbents.

There will be 60 new teachers in the district, a decrease of 25 from last year's turnover total.

Enrollment is not expected to change, though there will be no firm indication of enrollment levels until the school year starts.

Get off Channel O1 you ungood buddies!

As more and more people are coming into the CB world, we would like to stress the importance of the use of channel O1 as by mutual courtesy of the CB'ers in this area, that ch. O1 remain open as a trucker's channel which is monitored by a group known as the 4-Way Flashers.

This group is made up of concerned individuals whose aim is to help the trucker's and in general, the motoring public who require assistance, be it information, landlines, directions, messages and most important emergency calls. This is done only on a 24 hour basis, 365 days a year and we would ask your help in keeping this channel clean for the above purpose.

To date, there are only 4 bases in town that are able to monitor on a 24 hr. basis so if there are any more concerned citizens out there that would make a good monitoring base, then please get in touch with Sandman, Rockcrusher and Pebbles, Little Mama or myself. Also please note that we do not give out Smokey reports or time checks, so do not ask us for this.

Which brings to mind, the use of some individuals on other channels. For want of do I sat down and scanned the channels (I know this makes me a rubber neck) regardless I was amazed to find that during those few minutes, 6 out of 23 channels were being used for sheer nonsense.

Playing hide and seek, exchanging receipts and arranging blind dates are not what the CB was meant for. Word has it that a cleaning up of the air waves is in progress so hopefully a lot of this nonsense is about to be eliminated. If you are guilty of these offences, please clean up your act or leave the mike unkeyed or you're liable to find yourself 10-7 in the future.

Come on Terrace, let's make ourselves known as the good CB'ers.

Speaking of 10-7, once again it's that time for me too, so the best to all of you, keep smilin' and let's keep all the channels clean, 10-4? Catch you on the flip flop...3's Dino

POACHING, POLLUTION REGULATIONS

Long-awaited changes heralded

By BRIAN GREGG
Herald staff writer
Amendments to the Canada Fisheries Act, designed to provide greater protection to the aquatic environment and stiffen the penalties for poaching and other offences, will go into effect September 1.

Local fisheries officer John Hipp says it's about time these amendments came into effect.

He said poaching is not a serious problem in the future a fisheries officer will be able to enforce the fishing regulations as a peace officer under the criminal code.

He said this does not mean fisheries officers will become policemen because their only duty will be to enforce the fishing regulations.

He said a summary conviction for illegal possession of salmon will increase from $1,000 to a $5,000 maximum fine, will range from $50,000 to $100,000.

He said the courts can order an offender to clean-up the mess or force him to pay clean-up costs.

Fines can also be levied for the destruction or disruption of fish habitat and fish food.

He said if bark from a logging truck falls into the water and disrupts the food supply it will be classified as pollution.

Fish eggs are now classified as fish and charges involving the disruption of eggs can also be laid.

A person who is fishing illegally even though he is not in possession of fish can also be charged, he said.

Tickets can be given to person involved in minor offenses like fishing without a license, he said. Anyone who is given a ticket can pay the fine without going through the courts.

Fisheries and Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc said in a news release the main objective of the changes to the act is to preserve the country's natural environment and its renewable resources plus a crack down harder on people who flaunt fisheries regulations.

He said poaching has caused a loss to the B.C. salmon industry of more than $3 million a year.

"With new provisions and heavier penalties under the revised Act, we will be in a much better position to deal with the poaching problem. At the same time, we will need the support and cooperation of the fishing industry and the general public to back up the efforts of the federal and provincial authorities," LeBlanc said.

New Zion Baptist minister here

Land commission must be strong

On the surface, the proposed amendments to the Land Commission Act seem like innocent changes designed to give the provincial cabinet equal power with the land commission. But on deeper study, they are bad news indeed.

Under amendments introduced by Environment Minister Jim Nielsen, the political cabinet will be allowed to consider and overrule decisions made by the land commission. Though Nielsen says the amendments will not alter the intent of the act, they, unfortunately, will do just that.

One of the positive aspects of the farmland laws introduced by the previous NDP government was the independent nature of the land commission. Here was a board that would preside like a judicial body. Instead of judicial precedence, per se, it had a legal mandate: to preserve the depleting acres of good, arable land in this rocky, mountainous province.

Despite the wheat fields of the Peace River; the fruit farms of the Okanagan; the dairy, vegetable, and mixed operations of the Fraser Valley and south Vancouver Island; and the stump ranches river bottoms and plateaus, British Columbia must still import most of its food.

The legacy of our development has been an eroded farmland base. The lesson of history has taught us to stop that trend and with the Land Commission Act of 1973, this province moved in that direction.

Protestations which accompanied the initial introduction of the bill have been muted, the act has been copied and applauded by many other jurisdictions, yet, today, its most important feature - the independence of the commission itself - is threatened.

one, separated as much as possible from political exigencies. The revisions suggested by the Bennett government deny that imperative.

Nothing has changed over the past four years to lend support to a toning down of the act. There is still too little farmland in B.C.; our population continues to grow.

Traditional out-of-province sources of food are themselves victimized by encroaching industry or housing. The continued dependence on outside suppliers makes us worrisome of the vagaries of or the marketplace.

Only when we start producing enough in B.C. can we talk about loosening the rules on preservation of agricultural land. There is every indication, however, that we will never again be able to produce the quantities needed to meet our own needs.

The answer then is a strengthened, not weakened, land commission. It must be completely independent, attuned to the overall need of the people not the political needs of the elected.

TAX CUTS, PRICE FREEZE

Sweden drops Krona to buy time

By BRUCE LEVETT
LONDON CP - The devaluation of the Swedish krona, the third within a year, is here as an attempt to gain time while a wide package of economic measures is developed for Sweden.

This latest devaluation, experts say, is expected to solve little in itself. Already, 'been offset as Sweden's trading partners in Scandinavia reluctantly but swiftly followed suit.

Experts view the devaluation has having been forced on Sweden by a delayed impact of the world recession on Swedish exports and the economy as a whole.

They feel the Swedish government is hoping to gain time for its package of austerity measures to take effect. A two-month price freeze, a cut to 35 percent from 37 in taxes paid by employers and limited public spending are among the measures announced to back up devaluation.

Until recently, Sweden was regarded as a model of an advanced and efficient industrial society. It had advanced technology, enlightened labor relations, skilled and enterprising management and a quality-conscious labor force which rarely went on strike.

Then things began to slip. In the first quarter of 1977, economic growth and fallen to zero, production was down and prices were rising swiftly.

Observers here say the immediate cause was extremely high wage levels among the highest in the world and two to three times greater than those prevailing in Britain.

However, they also see some short-term and medium-term miscalculations.

The traditional Swedish response to world recession has been to keep the domestic economy relatively buoyant in order to be ready to take advantage of the recovery when it arrives.

The recession, however, was longer than expected and the recovery slower and Swedish industry suffered.

There is also another factor-tax rates, like wage rates, among the highest in the world.

Experts here say it may well be that Sweden has reached the point where the people will have to choose between better and better welfare programs and encouraging more funds to go into productive investment.

This may be a stiff political hurdle for the year-old coalition government, the first non-Socialist administration in Sweden in 40 years.

Experts say the present situation cannot fairly be blamed on the coalition, but that the government is unlikely to be able to introduce adequate economic reform without co-operation from the Socialists and the trade unions.

Press freedom limited, says MP

OTTAWA CP - Progressive Conservative MP Gerald Baldwin, a leading proponent of less government secrecy, has accused Prime Minister Trudeau of attempting to restrict the freedom of the press.

Baldwin, MP for Peace River, told a local service club that with the government's failure to produce a freedom of information law and Trudeau's alleged move to censor the press, "there is enough to frighten all true believers in the democratic system."

Freedom of information proposals tabled last month in the Commons of Secretary of State John Roberts listed nine types of government information which should be kept from the public to preserve responsibility.

The Alberta MP called the a diversionary tactic to get past the elections, adding that the only major critics of the government are the media.

"But the government like all governments, doesn't like to be criticized and is taking various insidious steps to curtail that criticism."

Referring to a statement made by Trudeau in June involving an investigation into the separatist bias of Radio-Canada, the French language arm of the CBC, Baldwin said Trudeau's warning of imposed discipline was indicative of censorship of the press.

"Mr. Trudeau is not only upset about this media approach and separatist threat, he wants to do something about it. Exactly what is not yet clear, but the bits and pieces he has let fall are indicative of censorship," Baldwin said.

Returning control to developers

Graham Lea, New Democrat MLA for Prince Rupert, has attacked the Social Credit government for opening the way for increased urban sprawl and unplanned land development.

"Again, we are seeing this administration give way to the pressures of land developers who see only the short term benefits to be reaped and do not examine the long term effects upon community development," said Lea.

Mr. Lea said this pressure was indicated by a recent order in council which repealed a regulation approved when he was minister of highways. Under this regulation, the minister could regulate and refuse subdivision plans in unorganized territory if he considered that urban sprawl or increased costs to nearby communities would be detrimental to those communities.

"By removing this regulation, the Socials are saying that land development can proceed without the necessary review to insure sound land use and without proper consideration of neighboring communities. Are we to return to Gagliardi era when rural areas and highway access were open range for the land developers and real estate speculators?"

"The New Democratic government worked to provide adequate access to the land for all groups, but we did so in the understanding that our land resources are not unlimited and that land use must be planned and integrated with existing communities."

Freeze asked on foreclosures

New Democratic Party consumers affairs critic Norman Levi today called for a moratorium on mortgage foreclosures to help B.C. families keep their homes during the continuing economic slump.

Mr. Levi, NDP MLA for Vancouver-Burrard, noted that Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, a federal Crown Corporation, has announced that the number of foreclosures on NHA loans in the B.C.-Yukon region will exceed 160 this year compared to 84 in 1975 and 13 in 1976.

"The holy economic trinity of high unemployment, a soft real estate market and an ever increasing inflation rate will bring about the ruin of hundreds of young families in British Columbia because they cannot pay their mortgages," Mr. Levi said. "After discussing with several officials in the mortgage lending field, I feel it is apparent that British Columbia's lack of sound economic policies has brought about the highest foreclosure rate since the city thirties."

"A significant problem because of unemployment is that with young couples who have mortgages, the payments were invariably based on both people working. When one spouse becomes unemployed, the trouble meeting the payments starts."

"Those families that are prepared to sell their homes to cut their losses find that because of a soft real estate market they are not able to sell unless they can take an even bigger loss. The real estate market is artificially soft because the free market system is not allowed to work. Although it is characterized as a 'buyers market', very few people are buying. The provincial government's stupid plan to sell the apartments at the Burnaby Green project in Burnaby is an indication of the state of the real estate market."

Mr. Levi said, "the province must intercede and see that a moratorium is put on all foreclosures particularly where unemployment is a basic cause."

Business Spotlight

Funny-name-but-good-food

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. CP - It's got a silly name and looks like a hot dog with elephantiasis, but the British Columbia government hopes to make the geoduck clam that's pronounced goeyduck into a multi-million dollar industry.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawf, spurred on by a 110,000 pound order for geoduck siphons from Japan, has commissioned a $36,000 study of geoduck reserves to lay the basis for what he says could become a $3 million a year industry.

Heading the study for commercial quantities of the corpulent crustacean is Bruce Evans, a 25 year old marine biologist and president of Coast Biochore Ltd., owner of the 50 foot research vessel Pursapa.

The Pursapa's quarry is no ordinary clam. Weighing up to 12 pounds, geoducks are found in 60 to 80 feet of water, their long, mean siphon sticking out of the sand. To harvest them is simple-divers simply blow the sand away with high-pressure hoses.

The Pursapa worked its way down 130 miles of Vancouver Island's east coast before striking geoduck paydirt near this fishing and logging community 140 miles northwest of Victoria.

Provincial conservation officer Bob Cox donned scuba gear and went over the side in a bed of kelp near a small island. Moments later he was back on the surface, clapping his hands above his head in a victory signal.

"The first thing I saw down there was a geoduck siphon," he said. "The bottom is all sand."

Cox returned to the bottom with the hose and was back at the boat in five minutes with six big clams. "I could have filled the whole bag up," he said.

The biggest specimen weighed 8½ pounds. Almost half the body weight is edible. The meat is than most clams, Cox said, and is much more plentiful.

One diver can bring in 1,500 to 2,000 pounds a day from a well-stocked bed, he said, and the Pursapa's survey has found several promising beds.

Some problems remain, however, including the unusual name. Provincial officials are considering several alternative, including rocky mountain abalone.

Regulation of the new industry is another serious problem, Cox said, because Washington state, which takes $5 to $7 million worth of the clams annually, has found the geoducks need a decade to recover from one harvest.

In the meantime, though, Cox is primarily concerned with his inventory. When the five-month contract ends in December, the Pursapa will have studied the entire coast south to Victoria.

LEADS MARCH AGAINST UNION

Working class hero goes back

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON CP - Britain has a new fold hero - a 46 year old boxer who strode purposefully out of the paint shop and into the headlines with the cry "We want to work."

He was not alone, but it was Ron Hill who stepped forward and stopped a walkout that might have tied up the state-owned British Leyland, largest automobile manufacturer in the country.

Ron Hill has the broad nose of an ex-fighter. His hairline is receding. It's strong face and, in the last few days, it has been spread across the front pages of most of England's national newspapers.

He lives, like his "mates" in a semi-detached house in a Birmingham suburb. He refers to Leyland, where he has worked for 10 years as "up there."

Leyland workmen, in defiance of Labor government pleas for wage restraint, are asking for a 47-percent pay increase. In the absence of firm company assurances, shop stewards had called for a walkout.

Television crews were on hand to record the second mass strike at Leyland this year. What they got, however, was footage of angry employees - Ron Hill at their head-marching on the shop stewards' offices.

The cries of "We want to work" and chants of "No strike, no strike" along with some unprintable advice to the stewards - came across clearly.

The stewards called off the walkout and Derek Robinson, their leader, said afterwards it was "a sad day" for unionism.

Not everybody saw it Robinson's way. The Sunday Express said: "The scene may go down in history as the moment Britain finally came to its senses, the first day of a new industrial revolution bringing hope to us all."

Hill said later he was contemptuous of official union claims that the sentiment was 50 to 1 for the strike call.

"Two-thirds of the workers up there feel the same as me. They don't want this strike and they think the stewards were too quick to call it. They didn't give the management time to consider."

Hill has calmed down considerably since the confrontation, but says he still believes "we want a lot more honesty from the management as well as the shop stewards."

He rejects with a snort suggestions that he is a company man.

"I've never been a bosses' man. Ask my mates. What worries me is that if Leyland goes down, we shall lose our jobs and so will a lot of others. All through this area there are lots of small firms making components for cars. It would hit them, too."

He disclaims both political and union ambitions. "Sometimes I vote and sometimes I don't and that's about as far as I go, politically."

A member of the Transport and General Workers union, he has been asked to stand for union office, "but I said no, I haven't the time, really."

"All I want up there is the truth and the right to work. If I'm to be hanged for wanting the truth, it's time I was off this earth."

Japan's top slugger gets People's Honor

TOKYO AP - On an average of once every 10.4 times at bat, the superstar of Japanese baseball, Sadaharu Oh, clouts the ball over the fence with his noted raised-leg swing.

That rate over 19 seasons brought him even Wednesday night with the record of 755 career home runs hit by American Hank Aaron, whose rate was one home run every 16.3 times at bat over 23 seasons.

Aaron, who faced tougher pitching and longer fences in United States baseball, retired last year with 41 home runs more than Bobo Ruth's career record of 714. When Oh hits No. 756, he stands to receive a new People's Honor citation from the Japanese government, becoming the first person so honored. And he says he intends to play ball five more years, in the belief he will be able to hit and field just as well at age 42.

The Japan-born Chinese slugger of Tokyo's Yomiuri Giants tied the record with a two-run homer in the first inning on a 3 and 1 pitch against 21 year old left-hander Michio Miura of Taiyo Whales.

The 298 foot drive brought a thunderous ovation from 50,000 spectators at Korakuen Stadium, the Giants' home ground. But Oh said later, "I tied Aaron's record step by step, so I have no special feeling now."

"Since my 753rd homer there has been a tense atmosphere in the ballpark. Some home runs come easily but others come more than 10 games apart."

The ball was grabbed in the right-field stands by a teen-age boy and later was exchanged for prizes and will be placed in Japan's baseball museum.

The 755 home runs took Oh 2,425 games and 7,871 times at bat, compared with 3,275 games and 12,300 times at bat for Aaron.

Oh gained fame as a pitcher and slugger for Waseda Commercial High School of Tokyo. He joined the Giants after graduation in 1959.

Oh hit his first professional home run April 26, 1959, in the same Korakuen Stadium.

Oh hit his 755 home runs in some 4,000 fewer times at bat than Aaron. He has won the Japanese triple crown, for batting average, home runs and runs batted in. He won the home-run title 13 consecutive times and was named the league's most valuable player eight times.

As a result of Oh's achievement, Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda has ordered a new civilian medal, with Oh to be the first recipient.

The slugger, now earning $240,000 a year, is estimated to have earned $2.64 million during his 19 year career.

Player's wife gets superstitious on win streak

PHILADELPHIA AP - "Nah, I don't have any superstitions," said manager Danny Ozark of Philadelphia Phillies. "But you ought to talk to my wife. She has a million of them."

It's true. The most superstitious member of the Phillies' family is Ginny Ozark, the skipper's boss. "She always likes to sit in the same seat when we're on a winning streak," said Ozark. "In Chicago, after we won the first game of a four-game series, she found someone else in the seat the next day. She bribed him with four beers to get the seat."

Mrs. Ozark never leaves her seat when the Phillies are ahead, and wears a different hat every night during winning streaks at the National League baseball team.

About never leaving her seat when the Phillies are ahead, Ozark said, "I don't know how she held out the night we played until 3:23 in the morning."

Tommy Hutton, a pinch hitter and late-inning defensive replacement at first base, says he always chews gum during a game. If he gets on base he chews the same gum. If he's out, he changes to gum.

"I chew sugarless bubble gum," said Hutton. "It's the only kind my momma will let me chew."

Catcher Tim McCarver says he'll have nothing to do with superstitions.

"I'm a man of common reasoning," says McCarver. "I don't mess with the occult."

First baseman Rickie Hebner has a habit when he bats of reaching back and pulling on the top of his shirt.

"We received a lot of mail inquiring as to why I don't get a shirt that fits," Hebner said. "It's not a superstition, it's a habit. I've been doing it since I played in Little League." Davey Johnson, the superb pinch hitter, reveals that he is careful not to step on the infield foul lines.

"said not to do it - that if you step on a crack you'll break your momma's back," Johnson said. "I don't know if that's being superstitious or a belief."

Larry Bowa wears the same sweat shirt every game of a winning streak, which may explain why his locker mates, Greg Luzinski and Mike Schmidt, take a quick postgame shower and leave.

Outfielder Garry Maddox says he has no superstitions, but helped Schmidt observe one earlier this season when Schmidt was hot with the bat.

"We stopped at the same place on the way to the ballpark every day so he could buy a green soda and a newspaper," he said. "I was just driving. But I did try one of those green sodas and I liked it. It didn't help me."

MILLIONAIRE SKIPPER

Yacht Courageous chosen

NEWPORT, R.I. AP--Courageous, the 1974 defender skippered by Georgia millionaire Ted Turner, was chosen Tuesday by the New York Yacht Club to defend the America's Cup for the 23rd time.

After watching Courageous defeat Enterprise by one minute and 28 seconds Tuesday in the final defense series, the club dispatched its launch to the Newport Shipyard to advise the Enterprise syndicate, that his 12 metre yacht had been eliminated.

Enterprise was the second American boat to get the axe in two days. On Monday, Ted Hood's Independence was eliminated after losing to Courageous by 1:23.

It was a rags-to-riches yachting story for the 38-year-old Turner, who got his first dinghy from his father when he was 11. Turner started sailing in 1950, but it was not until 1974 that he got his first shot at the America's Cup.

It was a skipper of the yacht Mariner. It proved extremely slow and embarrassing for Turner who is owner of Baseball's Atlanta Braves.

This year, however, Turner has himself a proven product, Courageous, designed by Olin Stephens and redesigned by Hood, the man who had skippered Courageous to the 1974 Cup Copper pennies are reputed to be one of the world's greatest carriers of disease, on the surface.

Daniel Webster had such a beautiful speaking voice that he brought tears to the eyes of Chief Justice John Marshall when arguing a case in 1819.

victory over Australia's Southern Cross.

The move by the New York Yacht Club's selection committee came as a surprise. Most observers had expected Enterprise to remain in competition for at least another week.

The decision by the committee also means that Courageous will not race again for about three weeks, although she is expected to practice against Independence, the sister yacht in the Kings Point Syndicate.

They call Turner Terrible Ted, and The Mouth in the South.

He once called Lowell North, the ousted skipper of Enterprise, and his sailmaking partner, John Marshall, co-helms-man on Enterprise, liars.

"He North proved that when he promised to sell me sails and he didn't," Turner said.

Turner considers himself a sportsman among professionals, who stand to gain advertising by doing well in the Cup.

"I'm just in it for my own personal satisfaction," Turner said. "I want to do a good job and do whatever I can to help the New York Yacht Club. I'm not going to make money off this. I'm strictly an amateur."

LAST-SECOND PASS TO YOUNG

Thriller finish lengthens lead for Lions

By STUART LAKE
OTTAWA CP - Veteran Jim Young, with no time left on the clock, caught a 16-yard pass from quarterback Jerry Tagge Wednesday night to give British Columbia Lions a 27-24 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders in the Canadian Football League.

In one of the wildest finishes in many seasons at Lansdowne Park and with Ottawa appearing to be on the way to an undesired win, Tagge led the Lions down field with pinpoint passing and climaxed it all with the shot to Young, who stood just inside the Ottawa goal line.

The win pushed the Lions' margin to four points atop the Western Conference standings. Ottawa remained mired in a second-place tie in the East with Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The Lions held the lead through most of the game but surrendered it late in the fourth quarter after Ottawa linebacker Mike Widger intercepted a Tagge throw and stepped into the Lion end zone giving the Riders a 24-20 lead.

The Riders appeared content to hold the Lions to short pass gains but Tagge completed two short passes before connecting with Young.

Terry Bailey combined with Tagge for a 19 yard touchdown and Jim Harrison ran 14 yards for B.C.'s other scores. Lui Passaglia converted the three touchdowns and added two field goals.

Ottawa quarterback Tom Clements threw touchdown passes to Jeff Avery and Jim Foley for the other two Ottawa touchdowns. His throw to Avery was 51 yards; Foley caught a 10 yarder. Gerry Organ converted the Ottawa touchdowns and added a 20 yard field goal.

There were 27,248 fans. The Riders wasted a number of scoring chances on five turnovers-four fumbles, two by running back Richard Holmes, and an interception. They also ran into costly penalties-11 for 81 yards and gave B.C. the penalties. The touchdown by Avery also was tainted. Clements' throw was short but bounced off the finger tips of a Lion defender into Avery's hands.

Tagge, an elusive target for the Ottawa defence all night, completed 24 of 34 throws for 264 yards. Two of his passes were intercepted. Clements completed 17 of 27 passes for 272 yards. He was intercepted once. British Columbia managed only 80 yards rushing and Harrison was the leader with 3 yards on six carries. Holmes, whose two fumbles cost Ottawa dearly, got 51 yards on 12 carries as Ottawa rushed for a game total of 121 yards.

B.C.'s total game yardage was 344 while Ottawa managed 386.

ADJUSTS EASILY

Ambassador Beliveau glad-hands for Canadiens

By SCOTT ABBOTT
MONTREAL CP - Jean Beliveau, whose stylish play at centre was unsurpassed for 18 National Hockey League seasons, has adjusted easily into his new career as the primary ambassador for the Montreal Canadiens.

"I'm not stopping much," he said Wednesday as he spent part of his 46th birthday re-presenting the team at a news conference for a forthcoming golf tournament, the proceeds from which will go to the Association des Scouts du Canada.

"I've been in my office at the Forum since early this morning looking after a few things. After this I have to go to the Man and His World site for a radio station promotion, but that shouldn't take too long. I think I'll probably be home tonight a little earlier than usual."

His playing days ended with the 1970-71 season, when he helped the Canadiens win their 10th Stanley Cup since he joined the club full-time in the 1953-54 campaign. It was said he was making too much money as an amateur with Quebec Aces to afford to turn professional, but when he made the switch it was for the princely sum of $100,000 plus bonuses for five years.

Today, Beliveau is vice-president and director of corporate relations for the Canadiens, but he guards his physical condition as if he were waiting for the next shift on the ice.

"I try to keep my weight at 205, which was my playing weight," he said, "but now I'm maybe two or three pounds over that because I hurt my achilles tendon jogging. I was on my route near home when I pulled it and I didn't think anything of it. But that was two weeks ago, and I told the doctor yesterday that it better clear up soon."

Despite such indications of middle age and creeping grey in his hair, the six-foot-three inch native of Trois-Rivieres, Que., does not look much different from what he did in the last few seasons of a career that earned him entry to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1972.

Beliveau scored 507 goals in 1,125 regular-season games, becoming the fourth player, after Maurice Richard of the Canadiens, Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings and Bobby Hull of Chicago

Black Hawks, to reach 500. He had 712 assists and added 79 goals and 97 assists in 162 playoff games. He was a member of the first all-star team six times and the second team four times.

He is at least as well known, however, as being one of the leading gentlemen of sport, and it is largely that quality which has kept his name on the lips of those seeking new political leaders.

"I've been approached by parties at both the provincial and federal levels," he acknowledged, "but I haven't taken them up on any offers. When I retired I thought about it, but after almost 3 years travelling, I thought I couldn't get into that, with all the time it would involve. I owed something to my family."

ACE PITCHING

Expos nearly hitless in 6-0 rout

By GLENN COLE

MONTREAL CP - Ace right-hander Tom Seaver limited Montreal to just three hits Wednesday night and Joe Morgan clouted his 21st home run of the season as Cincinnati Reds blanked the Expos 6-0 in a National League baseball game.

Seaver struck out six to run his lifetime total to 2,501 enroute to his 16th victory against five losses.

The Reds jumped on Montreal starter Wayne Twitchell, 3-1, for a pair of runs in the first inning with Morgan starting the trouble with a two-out single.

Twitchell, pitching for the first time in nine days, then walked George Foster and advanced both runners with a wild pitch before Dan Driessen singled to centre to score both runners.

With two out in the third, Morgan drilled Twitchell's first pitch over the right-field wall and Cincinnati added another run in the fourth when Driessen led off with a single and eventually scored on Bill Plummer's single down the third-base line.

Driessen's single, a double by Cesar Geronimo and a sacrifice fly by Champ

Summers completed Cincinnati's offence in the ninth inning.

The biggest threat against Seaver came in the seventh when Andre Dawson and Tony Perez hit back-to-back singles to lead off the inning.

But Gary Carter flied out and Seaver fanned Del Unser and Larry Parrish to end the inning. Seaver, who won all three Montreal this season, retired the first six men he faced before giving up a lead-off single to Parrish in the third.

After Chris Speier fouled out, Seaver walked Twitchell before getting Dave Cash to hit into an inning-double play.

Aside from that, the Expos never threatened the Cincinnati pitcher in the early innings and Seaver went on to boost his life-time mark against Montreal to 14-8.

Twitchell, who gained credit for a 5-1 triumph over Cincinnati Aug. 22 despite having to leave with a shoulder problem, lasted six innings, surrendering six hits and four earned runs.

Former Red Santo Alcala started the seventh. The win was Cincinnati's seventh in 12 games against Montreal this season and left them with a 4-2 mark at Olympic Stadium.

Greaseball pitcher caught red-handed by photos

A Kansas City Royals' coach put photographer Ray Corey of up to it.

The result three pictures of Gaylord Perry, 38-year-old pitcher of Texas Rangers, in some curious but not necessarily in the American League baseball team's dugout Tuesday night.

Texas beat Kansas City 8-2 and Perry retired 24 of the last 26 batters he faced. They showed Perry probably was sometimes putting grease on the ball before he threw it.

One of Corey's lap as he sat between team-mates in the dugout, his right leg folded so the right foot was cocked on top of the left knee. There was towel piled along the inside of the right leg. His hand swayed in his lap, and in them could see end of a cylindrical object.

In a blown up, it looked about the size of shotgun shell.

A nasal inhaler. Petroleum jelly.

In the second picture, Gaylord had turned his head to the left and was seen in profile sitting on the bench. The towel was in his right hand, which he was holding. His left arm was reaching toward the right ear, but the hand was hidden by the towel.

Was he wiping away. His ear itching. Was he making a grease deposit.

The third picture showed Perry full length, standing on the mound waiting to make the next pitch. His right hand was on his right jaw with fingers lying up behind the right ear.

Toothache. Making a withdrawal.

"Everybody know what he does," said Whitey Herzog, manager of the Royals. "But I don't want to get into an hassles. He pitched well. He's a good competitor. I used to get excited about it...running out to the mound and all. Now I just tell 'em to hit the dry side of the ball."

The Royals cuffed Perry around a bit in the first two he had an explanation: Too Much on the ball.

"The ball was moving too much, so I had to adjust...move my target over. It was just too strong, you call overthrowing. I knew I had good stuff 'cause the ball was moving. I had good enough stuff so that when I walked guys it didn't scare me. When the ball is moving well you aren't concerned about them getting good wood on it consistently. I had super stuff-curve, hard-slider, fast ball. All my stuff."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Oldtimers keep Yankees on top

Some familiar names are keeping New York Yankees on top in the American League East.

Graef Nettles slammed a one-out home run in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Yankees a 5-1 victory over Seattle Mariners Wednesday night. It was Nettles' second homer of the game and moved the defending Al home run champ into the league lead with 34.

Sparky Lyle, 12-4, gained the victory for the third consecutive game as New York won its 20th game in its last 24. The Yankees lead second-place Baltimore and Boston by four games.

Baltimore moved into a second place tie with the Red Sox by beating California 4-3. Doug DeCinces' homer off Frank Tanana was the decisive blow as Dennis Martinez, 12-7, pitched a five-hitter in out-dueling Tanana, 15-8. Cleveland Indians overcame a 3-0 Red Sox lead and beat Boston 4-3 on Jim Norris' tie-breaking pinch-hit double in the ninth inning.

Wayne Gross' two-run homer helped Oakland's A's overcome Minnesota Twins 4-3. Detroit Tigers defeated Milwaukee Brewers 5-2 as Milt Wilcox captured his sixth straight win with a seven-hitter and Fred Patek's two-run double in the sixth inning was the key hit as Kansas City Royals topped Texas Rangers 6-5.

In the National League, San Francisco Giants defeated Pittsburgh Pirates for the 10th time in 12 games this year as Darrell Evans slammed four hits, including a three-run homer, and Jim Bar pitched an eight-hitter in the Giants' triumph.

Tom Seaver hurled a three-hitter for his eighth straight triumph and Joe Morgan belted his 21st home run as Cincinnati Reds blanked Montreal Expos 6-0.

Steve Carlton pitched an eight-hitter for his 19th victory of the year as Philadelphia Phillies rallied for four runs in the fifth and a 6-1 decision over Atlanta Braves. Houston Astros won their seventh straight and handed New York Mets their seventh loss in the row, 5-2.

Rollie Fingers piced up his 30th save as San Diego handed St. Louis its seventh straight defeat 2-1. Rick Rhoden singled in a run and combined with Lance Rautzhan and Mike Garman on a six-hitter as Los Angeles Dodgers beat Chicago Cubs 5-1.

Bayi-vs-Walker

Vancouver gets mile showdown

NEW YORK AP - The Dream Mile showdown race between Filbert Bayi of Tanzania and John Walker of New Zealand is set for Sept. 17 in an international track and field meet at Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

Dan Shedrick, president of TeleSports International, the television packager of the event, made the announcement Wednesday at a news conference.

The race, which has been approved by the athletic associations of both Tanzania and New Zealand, will be telecast live on ACB's Wide World of Sports.

Bayi and Walker will face six other world-class runners and the race will be run under international rules during the Vancouver international track and field meet.

The meet is sanctioned by the Canadian Track and Field Association and the British Columbia Track and Field Association.

The race will be run on a tartan track in 30,000 seat

Empire Stadium.

Other runners in the mile field will be Mike Boit of Kenya, Dave Hill of Montreal, Steve Ovett of Britain, Wilson Waigwa of Kenya, Thomas Wessinghage of West Germany and Steve Scott of the United States.

Bayi, 24, set the world record for 1500 metres at three minutes, 32.2 seconds. The 25 year old Walker is the mile record holder at 3:49.4. Bayi's 1500 metre standard is equivalent to a 3:49.2 mile.

Bayi's 1500 metre record was set in the Commonwealth Games in Christchurch, New Zealand, on Feb. 2, 1974. Walker established the mile mark in Goteborg, Sweden, on Aug. 12, 1975.

The two last met in the 1974 Commonwealth Games, where Bayi set the 1500 metre record, finishing just ahead of Walker.

Fishermen may sue over spill

STEVESTON, B.C. CP-United States fishermen have threatened to sue the Canadian government for damages as oil from a 10,000-gallon spill here Monday spread into American waters, a spokesman for the International Salmon Commission said Wednesday.

John Roos, the commission's assistant director, said in an interview that the ISC was notified of the threatened suit as it considered closing salmon fishing in U.S. waters because of oil contamination.

Roos said the U.S. Coast Guard has told the federal Environmental Protection Service that American fishermen are upset with having to fish in contaminated waters that they have threatened to sue both the government and company responsible for the spill.

About 700 Canadian fishboats are already tied up as a result of a closure of the lower Fraser River and part of Georgia Strait ordered by the commission.

Steveston is located at the mouth of the Fraser, and about eight miles south of Vancouver and 1 mile north of the Canada-U.S. border.

The spill apparently occurred late Monday when a submerged pipe connected to an oil tank at the Canadian Fishing Co. Ltd., plant was struck by debris carried by the high tide in the Fraser. The pipe was ruptured and heavy bunker B oil emptied into the river.

As the oil spread south Wednesday, criticism mounted about the way in which federal agencies organized the cleanup. It did not begin until 15 hours after the spill was reported, although the equipment for it was available immediately.

It was estimated that it will take at least three days before the oil in Steveston harbour is cleaned up and before it is scrubbed from the rocks and pilings along the riverfront.

Roose said the Americans said they would use their own cleanup equipment and charge the Canadian government for all the costs.

He said the decision to close the Canadian lower Gulf waters and the waters off Point Roberts, Wash. for an indefinite period was made because Canadian fishermen did not want to foul their gear and they felt the salmon caught would not be fit to eat.

But he said he is getting the opposite advice from U.S. fishermen who believe in oily water will be safe if sufficiently washed.

Loudest criticism of the federal cleanup came from Bill Otway, executive director of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation, who has sent a telegram to Transport Minister Otto Lang, demanding a public inquiry. "It's a goddamned disgraceful," said Otway.

The crew of the dredger Fort Langley first reported the spill to the Coast Guard, the Vancouver marine traffic controller and the marine emergencies staff about 11 p.m. Monday but no cleanup action was taken until Tuesday morning.

John Pye, second mate on the Fort Langley, said if a boom had been placed around the ruptured line immediately, the spill could be controlled.

Keith Hebron, an EPS officer, said his agency was notified Monday night and, in turn, informed other federal agencies. He said no cleanup operations are possible at night but many federal officials were on the scene early Tuesday.

Clean Seas Canada Ltd. was called in to work on the cleanup described as the largest ever pollute Greater Vancouver waters.

Captain J.C. Young, regional manager of emergency operation for the Coast Guard, said he was notified of the spill at 11 p.m. Monday but was not asked to supply any cleanup equipment.

He explained that his department has a stockpile of cleanup equipment available for any spill but actual responsibility for land-based spills, as this one was, rests with EPS.

"We could have supplied skimmers, booms and dispersants but no equipment was asked for," he said.

Replying to criticism of the cleanup operation, Ian Robertson, EPS emergency coordinator said the Canadian Fishing Co. did not know it was their spill until 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Tenders called for asbestos hauling

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. CP-Peter Steen, president of Cassiar Asbestos Ltd. said Wednesday he has called for tenders from several large West Coast shipping and barging firms to move 70,000 tons of asbestos a year to Vancouver from Stewart, B.C.

Steen said in an interview from Vancouver that his firm is investigating an all-Canada route to move its product from its Cassiar mine, 300 miles north of Stewart, to Vancouver.

The company now ships its production through Skagway, Alaska, by the Navigation Ltd. suspended Whitepass and Yukon route. The ore is then shipped in container vessels to L.Vancouver from Skagway. The tonnage represents 75 percent of the mine's annual production.

Although all tenders haven't been received, Steen said, the company to ship through Stewart rather than Skagway.

Shipping through Stewart would mean improved wharf facilities, a regular freight transportation route to southern B.C.

The town of Stewart has demanded a regular ferry connection since Northland Skagway, Alaska, by the Navigation Ltd. suspended Whitepass and Yukon route. service to the community earlier this year.

No new budget

VICTORIA CP-Premier Bill Bennett said Wednesday the British Columbia government, is not planning a new budget after a 2.4 per cent decline in the gross national product.

Bennett told the legislature that economic measures taken by his Social Credit government "don't need correction now." The premier pointed out that economic trends in the province have been running contrary to those in the country.

The growth in employment is at a three per cent annual rate, Bennett said, twice the national average. As well, the provincial national product has grown at an annual rate of five per cent.

Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace suggested that in the face of a recently announced provincial surplus, and in the face of record savings deposits in B.C., the government should cut its seven per cent sales tax in order to stimulate buying.

Bennett said that sales tax collections have increased this year, and that is an obvious sign that consumers are already spending more money, and that a reduction in the tax wasn't needed.

Few changes

VANCOUVER CP - Pat Brady, president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, says it now seems that few changes will take place within the schools with introduction of the core curriculum program this fall.

Brady, speaking in an interview Tuesday, said he was pleased with the recently announced adjustments to the ministry of education's original core curriculum proposal.

Your individual Horoscope

Frances Drake

FOR THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1977

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20) ♈
Mixed influences. Look deeply into all situations before acting. Surface appearances could be misleading.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21) ♉
A financial transaction could be highly profitable, but be sure you are aware of all the angles before you sign on the dotted line. Travel plans also favored.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) ♊
Mercury extremely generous. Especially favored: all those in the writing and journalistic fields; advertising and promotional interests; communications of every type.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) ♋
Be sure of the logic of your statements and decisions. Recognize a bright idea — your own or another's — and put into action whichever seems most likely to succeed.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23) ♌
Stars indicate some complications not easily unravelled. Yet, by diligent process, you will be able to rack up more than just fair results.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23) ♍
Some job procedures may be revised. You may not completely understand at first, but go along with the changes as best you can and you'll find that they work out very well.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23) ♎
No day for a shy violet. Let others know you have something of value to offer. What has seemed out of reach is closer than you may imagine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22) ♏
Not a good day in which to commit yourself to a long-range

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) ♐
Avoid tendencies toward overindulgence and contrariness. You can accomplish much if cooperative, and if you refuse to let frivolity interfere with necessary obligations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) ♑
Some good luck in business interests indicated. This will, therefore, be an excellent period in which to evaluate your progress as of now and make new plans for the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) ♒
What you feel is a certainty could be more of an illusion, so take a second look. Better to change plans now, if necessary, than to be sorry later.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) ♓
Stress self-control AND self-reliance. Don't count too much on the cooperation of others. Plan a workable program and make all commitments judiciously.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with great independence, a spirit of enterprise and are extremely ambitious. Once you have undertaken a project, you will see it through, no matter how great the obstacles. You are gregarious of nature, unusually versatile, with a strong affinity for science. There are many other fields in which you could excel, however — especially the law, journalism, politics, medicine, education, finance or publishing. With the proper education, of course, you should reach top levels of attainment, no matter which career you choose. Birthdate of: Walter Reuther, Amer. labor leader.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: L equals N

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Dear Abby

Communication Lines Seriously Jammed

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 18 years, and I'm ashamed to have my wife meet my business associates or customers.

She has her hair cut very short—just like a man, and she never wears any makeup. She hasn't worn a dress in two years. She always wears pantsuits.

When I ask her to try to look more feminine and let her hair grow, she gets angry and asks me why I married her. Well, Abby, she didn't look like that when I married her. She had pretty long hair, and she dressed like a girl. She says it's easier to wear her hair short, and she doesn't care what anybody thinks. Well I care.

She can well afford to go to the beauty parlor once a week, but she says it's too much trouble. If it weren't for the two kids, I'd leave her now. But I'll stay a few more years until the kids go off to college. That is, unless you can come up with some ideas to get her to change.

STUCK IN FLORIDA

DEAR STUCK: Your marriage is suffering from a serious communication gap. It's more than her mannish haircut and suits. She doesn't give a hoot what you think. Meanwhile, you are secretly plotting to leave her.

Level with her about your feelings, and please consider counseling if you want your marriage to survive.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure we've all been bored by people who are in the habit of telling long, drawn-out stories that are usually pointless and seem endless.

May I share a wonderful suggestion given to me by a very wise friend?

To test the interest of your audience, if someone interrupts you in the middle of a story and no one says, "...and then what happened," shut up!

I've tried it many times over the years, and I must admit, I have had to shut up a lot.

OLDER AND WISER

DEAR WISER: Thanks for a valuable suggestion. And in that connection, if you hear yourself saying, "...so, to make a long story short," it's too late already.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and no raving beauty, but I am not ugly, either. I was over at my girlfriend's house one night and she called up a boy I like. (I'll call him "D.") She asked him what he thought of me, and he didn't come right out and say he LIKED me, but he didn't say he HATED me, either. (I was listening in on the other phone.)

I was going to ask "D" to our club dance, but now I'm not sure. He has never asked me out, but whenever we were accidentally thrown together, he acted like he sort of liked me. I am all confused. What should I do?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Forget "D" and ask a boy who has asked you out. And if you want to be well-liked by both boys and girls, don't be a party to calling up boys. And NEVER listen in on the other phone. It's dishonest and childish.

Tom Marsh has accepted a position as assistant book-keeper in Geo. Little & Co.'s office and will commence his duties the first of the week. Lawrence Greig who has been filling the post for the past few months, is going to Saskatoon to attend university.

It was a jolly party that left town on Monday evening when the Boy Scouts, under the leadership of Assistant Scout Master Rev. Robinson, left for Lakelse Lake where they will put in a week in camp. Scout Master S. Kirkaldy conveyed the boys to the lake and assisted in getting them established before returning to town.

Piano and singing lessons. Terms on application. MRS. R. HANEY, Box 110, Terrace.

The Sunday School picnic was held on Wednesday of this week to Lakelse Lake. Between thirty-five and forty pupils taking advantage of the outing. A good shower had laid the dust and cooled the atmosphere. Rev. and Mrs. Allen were in charge and were assisted by Rev. Robinson who is in camp at the lake with the Boy Scouts. It was a happy conclusion to the summer holidays.

Miss Bessie Moore entertained a number of her friends at dinner on Monday evening. They had a pleasant evening.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Murray of Prince Rupert spent the week end at the Terrace hotel.

S. Larkerley of Port Essington was a visitor in town on Monday.

Miss Nora Scamman entertained the members of the basket ball team and a few friends on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Gladys Kenney who is going to attend school in Prince Rupert. The young people had a jolly evening.

Mrs. E. Carlson of Cedarvale was a visitor in town during the week.

Born in Terrace on August 26th, to Mr. and Mrs. Low of Calgary, a son.

Mrs. A. Egan who has spent the last month at her home in Duncan, B. C., returned to Terrace Monday.

The W. A. held its first meeting for the fall term at the rectory on Thursday of this week.

H. E. Allen of the forestry department at Prince Rupert, was here the first of the week.

J. A. Swanson, mine superintendent at Anyox, was a business visitor in Terrace the first of the week.

H. E. Wallace of Telkwa paid a visit to Terrace this week.

W. B. Everett of Vancouver and Ray Leason of Victoria, timber cruisers, spent the first part of the week here.

G. F. Monahan, Prince Rupert, was a business visitor here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Kenney returned Wednesday after a very pleasant motor trip to Vancouver, Victoria and other points. They saw a lot of B. C. they had not seen before and they travelled over a lot of roads, both old and new. It is such a trip as this that is going to help this part of the province get the kind of roads it is entitled to. The more people that can get out by car the sooner the desired end will be accomplished.

There was a good turn out of rate payers at the incorporation meeting held in the G. W. V. A. hall last night. The subject is now a live one. A fuller report will be given next week.

James Richmond returned to Terrace last Friday after a very pleasant holiday spent with relatives in Scotland. He says they all gave him a very fine time, but he is a Canadian and was glad to get back to Northern British Columbia.

Mrs. Haddock and two daughters of Prince Rupert are guests at the home of Mrs. W. S. Anderson on the bench.

Rev. W. A. Robinson entertained a number of children in Uak last week end to a picnic at Gold Creek.

Mrs. Robinson and son spent a few days last week the guests of Mrs. P. Merkley.

Capt. Parsons of the Church Army was a guest this week of Rev. W. A. Robinson and accompanied the Boy Scouts to Lakelse Lake.

Mrs. T. J. Kirkpatrick, accompanied by Miss Mildred, returned from Prince Rupert this week after a holiday.

Capt. and Mrs. Coulthurst broke up their summer home at Lakelse this week and have returned to their ranch at Kalkum.

Miss Peters was a guest for a few days last week of Mrs. H. King. She left Saturday for Georgetown where she will visit friends before taking up her school work at Ocean Falls.

Capt. Coulthurst returned last Thursday from Vancouver. He was accompanied home by Lt. Com. G. Lowry of H. M. S. Colombo. After a day at the ranch here the visitor returned to his ship accompanied by St. John Coulthurst.

Mr. Simpson of Anyox is spending a week at Hill farm and he will be accompanied home by his daughter Helen.

Misses Norma and Bertha McCubbin of Pacific spent last week end at Hill farm.

Mrs. Christie, Dorothy and Billie left Wednesday for their home in Rupert.

Mrs. Scamman entertained about 20 children on Thursday last and the boys and girls had a good time.

Miss Marsh left last Thursday to be with friends in Vancouver before taking up her teaching at Penticton.

Mrs. Ryan and two children returned to Prince Rupert on Monday after being guests of Mrs. T. Brooks. Mrs. Brooks accompanied her to Rupert.

Mrs. B. W. Riley and daughter Dorothy arrived home Friday after an extended holiday in the south. Mrs. Riley's mother, Mrs. Myers, accompanied them home and will reside here in future.

ADRIFT ON THE COPPER RIVER

Two Prospectors Have Troubles of Their Own, but Made the Grade

J. Gabriel and partner left Copper City on the 8th August for their claim on the Upper Cropper. They had some experiences which are best told in the words of Gabriel.

"We left Copper City on the 8th of August for my claims up the Copper river, to pack in some food and tools, to do my assessment work. Young Clark and myself made a fairly fast trip to 28 mile where the ferry is. We placed the horse and provisions on the ferry and was in midstream when the eye bolt which holds the cable pulled out and let us loose from the cable. We started down stream until the cable too k up and held us for a time. We began to think it was a case of sink or swim so Clark and I decided to try a plan to get off the ferry. We tied the rifle to the old boat and as much of our supplies as possible so they would not be washed off, as at times the ferry was submerged. As Clark could not swim very well I tied him to the saddle. I knew the horse would make it. So over we went into the river, with me hanging to the horses tail. We made the far bank. Our next problem was to get back to the right side of the river. We tried falling trees, but could not get one to hold. Finally we made a raft out of cedar logs and succeeded in reaching the Copper City side of the river. I would like to impress on our government, that when they put in a new cable be sure it is anchored well as the old one was not safe.

CANADIAN LEGION MEETING

The Canadian Legion held their regular meeting on the evening of Aug. 25th joined with the W. A. It was well attended and some very useful discussion of joint affairs took place. At the banquet (which was provided by the male members) the speeches proved to be of a high order, especially regarding the possibility of enrolling honorary members. One item of business which received assent was to place the Yets Hall at the disposal of the public on Sept. 1st. to discuss incorporation of Terrace as a municipality. The joint meetings are proving very successful. They are held quarterly.

Silver Cup Tram Ready End of Present Week

The new management at the Silver Cup property has suffered several delays in getting down to mining operations. First two of the towers for the tram had to be replaced. This caused the loss of a week, but it should be running the end of this week. Then in the raising the survey was at fault and to get the ore the miners had to angle. Now they are taking out the bumps. In one of the men are drifting along and the ore so that as soon as the tram gets going all they have to do is take the ore out.

Seventeen men are now working at the Silver Cup and as the underground workings develop more will be put on. Another lot of men will be put on when they start shipping. Mr. Dornberg is to be up again shortly and then plans for the winter operations will be completed. As soon as one starts coming down the hill the trucks will be loaded with lumber for the return trip. This company will do considerable more building for the accommodation of the large force and everything will be put in good shape for the winter.

"Men of Steel" on Wednesday Evening Next

One of the biggest pictures shows ever brought to Hazelton will be seen in the Hazelton theatre next Wednesday evening, September 7th. Remember the change of day. This change was made so as to give the people an opportunity to recover from the Barbecue on Monday. It is desired by the management that everyone have an opportunity to see this great picture. You will see Bills clinging to a chain and swinging over a cauldron of molten metal; you will see him trapped in a deep pit while a maniac prepares to empty a huge vat of liquid steel upon him; you will see him grappling with a ferocious police dog when the merest slip would have resulted in his face being torn to ribbons.

And you will see the thousands of steel workers with their wives and families, giving one of the most remarkable massed performances that the screen has ever seen. You will witness a steel funeral, an event without a parallel for sheer impressiveness in all the annals of interments. More than 2,000 participated in this scene.

"Men of Steel" is an amazing screen masterpiece. It is a picture that will live on as one of the really transcendently excellent film creations.

George Archambault, who directed, was awarded this prize plum because of the superior quality of his work for First National during the past two years. It is a picture of which Earl Hudson, the production manager, may justly feel proud. It is one of the outstanding mile stones in an outstanding brilliant career.

A reception was held last Wednesday evening in G. W. V. A. hall for the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Hazelton. There were a large number in attendance and the Atwood orchestra provided the music for dancing. A very jolly evening was spent and the happy young couple were given a real enthusiastic welcome to Terrace. In future they will live in the Spitzer house.

Mrs. T. Brooks is a guest of Mrs. S. H. Creelman at Uak.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Campbell announce the engagement of their daughter, Brinsley Rock Campbell to Cooper H. Winch, second son of Dr. H. C. Winch, M. L. A. of Hazelton.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. John Newick gave a tea in honor of Mrs. Fakeley who left that evening for her home in Saskatoon, Sask.

The boys came

THIS is being written from a hospital bed, where I am in traction and under heavy sedation. Don't worry. I wasn't in a car crash. I just had a five-day visit from my grandboys.

It seems that my daughter was moving and it was going to be awfully difficult with the boys underfoot and it was a great chance for Gran and Grandad to really have a good visit with their favorite people untrammelled by the interventions of parents.

What can you say? "Sorry, but we like to play golf in the afternoon, spend a quiet evening, and get up when we feel like it in the morning, during holidays?"

Of course you can't. You burble something like: "No problem, dear. We'd love to have them. It'll be a real treat." And then you hang up the phone, look at your better half, and mutter mournfully, "Good Gawd, the kids are coming."

They came, they saw, they conquered. And that's why I'm writing from hospital. As soon as I get out of traction, they're moving me, permanently, to a place called Autumn Daze, a home for chronic grandfathers to eke out their last few months, exchanging senile horror stories about grandchildren.

Oh well, it may not be so bad. My wife says she'll come and visit me regularly, except during the golf, skiing, fall and sewing seasons. That means once in March and once in November. She promised to bring me a drink on each occasion, because my nerves are shot to hell, too. But that's a long time between mickeys.

It isn't that my grandsons are bad kids. They're not. It's just that they are three and a half and one and a half years old, and their favorite sport, indoors and out, is tormenting the living daylight out of each other.

First few days weren't bad. The Old Lady has a way with them. She can change a diaper on one and carry on an incredibly complicated conversation with the other without getting a hair out of place. She can sit at the sewing machine, with one on each knee, and actually sew, as they try to poke their fingers under the needle. When she's cooking, she plops them up on the counter beside the stove, where the older one asks 84 questions, all beginning with "why," and the little one opens the cupboard doors and bangs his eye on them and shrieks.

During this period, my role was a fairly passive one. All I had to do was get them their breakfast. Nothing to that. I give them each a can of yoghurt and half a banana. For dessert, I open a can of peaches and get the ice cream out.

It may not be your standard, unimaginative, cereal breakfast, but the boys go for it and seem to thrive on it.

And then, of course, when they've finished breakfast and are in a great mood, there's not much for me to do. Except let them play around, on, and over me, break up eight fights over whose ball or shovel it is, and serve as a trampoline when they line up at the far end of the living room, run as hard as they can, and hurt themselves head-first into Grandad's lap, almost invariably knocking heads together, with subsequent recriminations, howling, and both of them on my knees being comforted.

But before you know it, lunch is over and it's nap time. No. 2 goes down happily with a bottle. No. 1 requires six stories. If I read the one about Flicka, Ricka and Dicka one more time, I'll go out of what is left of my mind.

But it works. He gets groggy. Just as he's drifting off, No. 2 hurls the bottle out of his crib, leaps up, rattles the bars, yells for action and both are wide awake ready for More Fun And Games With Grandad.

Afternoons in the backyard are comparatively peaceful, except for one thing. For some misguided reason, I have only one lawn hose. Did you ever see two boys with only one hose between them? Older is stronger. He wrests hose from Younger and squirts him with ice-cold water. Younger bellows, runs to Grandad, soaking from head to foot, and jumps up to be loved and petted.

Older forgets hose and starts to climb gate. Grandad vells. Meantime, Younger has picked up hose and gleefully squirts Grandad.

Grandad yells again, unprintably. Younger drops hose and runs, square into square corner of picnic table. Great welt on forehead. Gran will be furious with Grandad for not watching boys properly.

Those were the good days. Came Tuesday, and Gran was committed to a golf tournament. Dubiously.

"Are you sure you can cope?"

"Who me? Course I can cope. No sweat. I can handle these two with one head tied behind my back."

"Well, maybe... but..."

"Gawn, away wid yez. It'll be child's play."

And it was. Six hours of it. During which: eight fights were broken up; the boys ate all four of the chicken legs I'd prepared for the three of us; we went shopping and I lost one for 60 panic-filled seconds in the maze of the supermarket; the Younger discovered how to unfasten the buckle of the seat-belt; the Older started yelling for his Mommy when I smacked his ass for clobbering his little brother with a ping pong bat, which for some reason unknown to man or God, he had found behind the car seat.

My daughter walked in with a cheery "Hi, Dad!" and found me on the phone trying to call the police department, the fire department, anybody.

She looked at me, shook her head, took the phone from my shaking fingers, and called an ambulance.

Saguenay Syndrome

MONTREAL (CP) — One in 40 Quebecers from the Saguenay-Lake St. Jean region may carry a gene which can lead to a syndrome causing retardation, brain malformation and partial paralysis, says a Montreal neurogeneticist who, along with her husband, made the discovery.

Dr. Eva Andermann, speaking Wednesday at the Fifth International Conference of Birth Defects, said all the carriers are probably descendants of a couple from France who married in Quebec City in 1657.

A high incidence of the syndrome—known medically as agenesis of the corpus callosum with sensorimotor neuropathy—was revealed in 1975 by Dr. Andermann and her neurologist husband while they were on a holiday in the Saguenay-Lake St. Jean region.

Most known victims of the syndrome live in a triangular area bounded by the Saguenay River, Quebec City and Lake St. Jean. Most of the area is within the provincial riding of Charlevoix.

As people move from the Saguenay-Lake St. Jean region, chances of the disease appearing decrease considerably, since both parents must be carriers of the defective gene to produce a diseased child.

By ROSEMARY FITCHER
KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) —
At first glance they look like medieval knights with their chain-mail fronts, gloves and other protective garb. Instead of swords, however, they wield cutting knives.

They are members of the cutting line at J. M. Schneider
Inc., meat packers and their protective equipment costs the company a hefty $20,000. A chain mail glove costs $51.75.

Aprons are in the neighborhood of $40 and 400 sets are required.

The chain mail is as essential for the cutting line as it was for battling knights. A slip of the razor-sharp knives used could be deadly.

In addition to chain mail the butchers use plastic face masks, hard hats, forearm protectors and a wide range of other protective equipment.

Brain drain

NEW YORK (AP) — A steady 14-year decline in U.S. college board scores was blamed today on national traumas such as the Vietnam war and Watergate, lower educational standards and the increasing number of minority, poor and inferior students taking the tests.

A special 21-member committee, headed by former labor secretary Willard Wirtz, also blamed television and the divorce rate in its report on the results of a two-year study.

Since 1963, the average score in the scholastic aptitude test verbal section has dropped 49 points, to 429 from 478. Mathematics scores declined 32 points, to 470 from 502.

Scores range from 200 to 800. The 2½-hour test is given by the College Entrance Examination Board to about one million high school students a year as a tool for colleges trying to gauge future academic success.

—The "decade of distraction" caused by war, assassination, riots and political corruption "probably made quite a difference" in the motivation of young people.

Solar power surges-petroleum poops

As the end of the Petroleum Age looms electrical power and renewable energy resources will assume new importance.

Imagine a Canada unlike any you have known: with cleaner air, purer water, quieter cities, yet all the comforts and technology you could desire, fueled with inexhaustible energy. Sunlight trapped in rooftop panels heats factories and homes from coast to coast. A few western cities pipe hot water for heating and washing direct from the bowels of the earth. Fleets of windmills help light houses and run appliances on the prairies, in isolated northern villages and in the Maritimes. Some Maritimes electricity surges from the daily ebb and flow of Fundy tides. Elsewhere, it comes from traditional hydro, from prudent use of coal and nuclear power or, in some cities, from the burning of garbage. Many automobiles and aircraft use nonpolluting hydrogen. Some commuters hum to work in electric cars powered with compact rechargeable batteries; others fuel up with non-polluting methanol derived from forest wastes.

All this is possible, and parts of it are closer than you think. For the end of the Petroleum Age is in sight. Oil is dwindling, gas is running low and both are becoming very expensive. Petroleum may provide more than half our energy needs for the next 15 to 20 years, but we must soon start husbanding it for such necessities as petrochemicals, aviation fuel and agriculture. How will we live without oil?

In part, by placing a heavier reliance on electricity, which will take a variety of forms such as water, wind, coal. Other renewable resources include solar power; biomass which includes everything that grows, as well as human, animal, agricultural and forest residues; geothermal energy, several forms of heat, including steam reservoirs and hotwater deposits from deep in the earth; hydrogen to fuel cars and aircraft; and garbage.

We have in Canada, as physicist Amory Lovins points out, a unique opportunity to build an energy-efficient nation "operating not on its energy capital but its energy income, using natural energy flows that will always be there."

Creatures of the deep

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Scientists are exchanging theories about the catching of an allegedly prehistoric creature off the coast of New Zealand.

Some of the greatest ocean depths lie in trenches near New Zealand and even limited scientific efforts to plumb these depths have produced some strange finds.

Greatly increased commercial fishing of waters off the New Zealand coast in recent years, mainly by Japanese craft, have also brought reports of the sighting of grotesque sea monsters.

Recently a Japanese trawler fishing in deep waters, hauled in a huge decomposing mass of flesh. The material was unpleasant and smelly, but the crew thought it unlike anything that had been caught before.

Accordingly, photographs were taken before the creature was thrown back into the sea.

Examination of the photographs by a Yokohama University professor brought a claim that the creature was probably a plesiosaur, a species that lived more than 70 million years ago and was thought to be extinct.

CLAIM CHALLENGED
The claim has been challenged by other scientists. In Australia a fisheries expert declared that the Japanese had caught a decomposing whale or shark, which had been attacked by other fish. What appeared to be fins or flippers was simply sheets of flesh torn loose in the attack.

A Scottish zoologist produced a rival theory that the creature was a Hooker's sea lion. He said plesiosaurs could not live in cold deep waters such as those where the remains were found.

Japanese universities are not convinced, however, that the find was something so mundane. Tokyo University has asked the trawler to make a new search in the area and try to recover the monster for further study.

Two of Japan's leading newspapers, Yomiuri Shimbun and Asahi Shimbun, have sent reporters to New Zealand on a monster quest. They are trying to arrange helicopter trips to find the trawler, which is still fishing somewhere off the west coast of New Zealand.

Meanwhile New Zealand Herald, in an editorial, suggests that there is something fishy about the whole affair. The Japanese, it points out, are negotiating for fishing rights in New Zealand waters following the declaration of a 200-mile economic zone off the coasts.

The editorial wonders whether the Japanese are offering New Zealand a ready-made new tourist attraction in sea monsters in return for fishing rights. A sort of squid pro quo.

Canadians go cruising

Written for CP
By DeCOURCY H. RAYNER

For an increasing number of Canadians the ideal holiday is aboard a cruise ship, where you unpack on arrival and tuck your suitcase under the berth for the duration.

My wife and I have gone on such cruises twice now, and each time we have found the ship filled chiefly with Canadians. Two years ago we sailed the western Mediterranean on the Delphi and enjoyed it so much that we went back to the eastern Mediterranean.

Our latest two-week cruise was aboard the Ithaca, a Greek ship chartered by the Strand organization which has long been known in the United Kingdom for its hotels and holiday tours.

On the Ithaca this year, continuing until the end of October, three different cruises are offered, each sailing from Palermo in Sicily.

We left on a Saturday evening from Toronto on a charter plane with some 200 aboard. Arriving at the ship from Palermo airport the next day just after 1 p.m., we found that two other planes had carried passengers from Canada.

There were 455 passengers on our cruise, plus about 200 crew members, cruise directors and other service staff. A full ship of 632 passengers was booked on the next cruise.

All the rooms and cabins on the Ithaca are air-conditioned, as were most of the buses used for shore excursions.

Cabins were adequate, with either two beds or two berths, and each had a shower and toilet. The cruise price varies according to deck and whether the cabin is inside the ship or outside.

Shore excursions cost extra, except on the Greek island of Mykonos, where we went ashore by tender and by bus to the fishing village nearby. The boutiques there were the main attraction, and they provided some of the best shopping of the trip.

Our first stop was at Malta, made famous by the Knights of St. John. St. Paul was shipwrecked on the north side of Malta, which is called Melita in the Book of the Acts.

VISITED ATHENS

After a day at sea, we anchored off Mykonos, the island of Windmills. From there to Piraeus, the busy port of Athens. The excursion to the Acropolis, the hill which rises above the old and the new city, was a must.

The ruins of the Parthenon, said to be the world's most perfect building as far as symmetry in design is concerned, stand atop the rocky hill along with other ancient temples. A cross marks the spot where St. Paul preached.

Kusadasi on the coast of Turkey was the next stop. Buses took us 12 miles over the narrow roads to the ruins of the third city of Ephesus (there were five of them). The streets and buildings were built in the fourth century BC. Yet public toilets with marble seats and a canal of continuously flowing water still are evident in a room off the huge gymnasium.

St. Paul was imprisoned here. Our guide said Paul's strong public protests against the making of idols aroused the ire of hundreds of silversmiths who held a public rally in the gymnasium and persuaded the authorities to imprison him.

SAW HOLY LAND

Rhodes was next, the Island of Roses, with its ancient fortress city built by the Knights of St. John. We liked the clean beaches flanked by modern hotels.

After another day at sea we docked at Haifa, and spent two days sightseeing in Israel. First to Jerusalem and Bethlehem, a long bus trip that enabled us to see the bountiful crops and orchards of modern Israel. On the second day we went to Nazareth and from there to the Sea of Galilee, blue and calm on a sultry summer day.

After a fourth day at sea we reached Palermo on Saturday morning. Three excursions are offered here, two of them full-day. By the next day at 11:30 a.m. we were en route to the airport.

We found on the cruise that great value is given for the money spent. Days and nights are well planned and there is plenty of time for sunning and snoozing. A cruise provides both change of pace and time for rest and relaxation.

Dr. Rayner is editor of The Presbyterian Record.

Wildlife specialists have counted more than 750 nesting pairs of bald eagles on Admiralty Island, Alaska. That's the largest known concentration of the species in the United States.

EXERCISE SOOTHES THE MIND

Meditation in Motion

NEW YORK (CP) — "A man who likes running once told me, 'You can't run and worry at the same time,' and maybe that's another important aspect of active sports," said Estee Lauder, creator and director of a cosmetics company that bears her name.

Miss Lauder, an active sportswoman, said in an interview that exercise is "an escape from our usual concerns into something purely physical."

"Many of the executives in my New York office rush across Manhattan at lunchtime to play tennis or do gymnastics before returning to an afternoon behind their desks.

"They always come back physically and mentally refreshed. I wish we could bottle their afternoon-after-exercise energy."

She said a few women should find a few minutes every day that she can call her own without interruption and dedicate those minutes to physical exertion that will stimulate her body and "refresh her soul."

"These may be a few minutes behind closed doors in her office, a few minutes before dressing for the day or a quiet time in the bathtub.

SUGGESTS EXERCISES

Miss Lauder suggests some exercises that every busy woman can fit into her daily routine to help loosen tense muscles and stimulate circulation.

If you only have 20 seconds, close your eyes. Inhale deeply and then exhale very slowly, letting the entire body go limp. Try to empty your mind by thinking about a blank, cloudless sky. Inhale deeply and exhale slowly again and go limp. Slowly count down from 10 each time you exhale. Repeat twice.

If you can sit still for five minutes in your office or while stuck in traffic, this exercise is great, Miss Lauder says, for loosening stiffness in the upper back and neck.

Sit in a chair with your back straight, arms limp. Let your head fall forward loosely. Let your head fall backwards loosely. That's it. Repeat.

Next, with your arms down, back straight, let your head fall loosely forward, roll head in a circle to the left. Stop. Roll head in a circle to the right. Stop. Don't close your eyes. Repeat.

EXERCISE IN TUB

A 10-minute workout in your own bathtub is good because water's buoyancy makes exercising easier and the resistance of water lets muscles work more evenly and longer, so you are burning up more calories with less effort than it takes on dry land.

In a warm but not hot tub with a non-skid mat, lie down and relax. Begin with easy stretches for hands and feet.

Spread and relax your fingers underwater and rotate your wrists.

Point and relax your toes. Draw circles underwater by moving your ankles to the left, then the right.

Sit with your legs straight in front of you. Loop a dry towel around the bottom of one foot. Inhale and pull the towel up to raise your leg high. Exhale and lower your leg into the water. Repeat three times for each leg.

Sitting with your legs in front of you, inhale, stretching your arms overhead and leaning back slightly.

As you exhale, bend forward to clasp your legs. Stretch back up, inhaling and repeat first step. Repeat five times.

Canadian connection along the Rhine

Written for CP
By JEAN LOVE CALLOWAY
BONN (CP) — Thousands of Canadian tourists on the scenic Rhine cruise are unaware of Canada's past connections with the Rhineland, which are not featured in travel pamphlets.

From the Drachenfels—dragon's rock—the Rhine stretches north 16 miles where, on a clear day, you can spot the twin spires of Cologne Cathedral.

The spires, spared from air raids in the Second World War, look down on the adjoining Hohenzollern

Bridge just as they did that December day in 1918 when the 1st Canadian Division crossed the Rhine to establish an armistice bridgehead.

Ten miles south of the Drachenfels, obscured by wooded hills, are the blackened stumps of the Ludendorff railway bridge at Remagen.

Twice in less than 30 years this bridge fell into American hands.

On the same day in 1918 that the 1st Canadian Division crossed the Rhine at Cologne, the 2nd Canadian Division crossed at Bonn and the 42nd U.S. Rainbow Division under Gen. Douglas MacArthur crossed at Remagen.

The 1st Canadian Division occupied a dynamite factory and other industrial plants that still exist downstream from Cologne. Canadian soldiers were billeted in places like Troisdorf, Porz and Wahn.
